

Kim Allan Williams, MD, MACC, FAHA, MASNC, FESC

Dr. Williams is Chief of the Division of Cardiology at Rush University and specializes in cardiology, prevention and cardiac imaging. Dr. Williams has over 30 years of experience as an educator, researcher, and physician. Dr. Williams earned his BS at the College of The University of Chicago and he earned his MD at the University of Chicago's Pritzker School of Medicine. Dr. Williams completed his residency in internal medicine at Emory University with overlapping fellowships in cardiology, clinical pharmacology and nuclear medicine at the University of Chicago.

He has served on numerous national committees and boards including serving as the President of the American College of Cardiology, President of the American Society of Nuclear Cardiology, and Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Association of Black Cardiologists. He is also the founder of the Urban Cardiology Initiative in Detroit, Michigan to reduce ethnic heart care disparities, and continues community-based efforts in Chicago at Rush. Dr. Williams is the author or coauthor of multiple book chapters, editorials, review articles. He has served on many committees and boards, including, those of the American Heart Association, the American College of Cardiology, the American Medical Association, the American Society of Nuclear Cardiology, and the Association of Black Cardiologists. He is an impassioned advocate for lifestyle changes, as a means of reducing the risk of heart disease.